Working with pixel-based images offers a lot of flexibility and artistic liberty, but there is a cost in terms of size, quality, and file size. You need to determine the appropriate image type for the work you want to do. A pixel-based image is created from scanned raster data. The one with the highest resolution provides the most detail. However, it may require a large file size if you want to print it. A vector-based image is created from vector graphic data. Vector-based images are not limited in their size. A street artist altered his own body multiple times to depict the popular web series and entertainment news show. On the left is what Ryan created, while on the right is what Josh created during the contest. The Sandbox, which debuted in August 2011, features a straightforward premise: four contest-winning artists who reinterpret the iconography of MTV’s online show fall into a makeshift studio and compete against each other to make the best original animation. What MTV isn’t saying is that, for the first time, the show has also set up a web app that allows users to create their own versions of the short. “Part of the process of this is learning how to draw character animation,” Ryan tells Bustle. “It’s also learning how to construct a story.” Ryan works on the show as the pen or inking assistant. It’s his job to clean up a page, make sure all the lines are smooth, and then to paint the characters within the space. He finished the episode he was working on in four days. He was working on the episode, “Kenny,” where you see a screenshot of Kenny — who’s a castaway on the show — in a dialogue with a trader on the “Real World” Facebook page where you got to decide who would win. “Me and my drawing partner decided that Kenny was going to say that the trader is a literal bitch,” Ryan tells Bustle. “The end of it was him saying ‘you know what, bitch, if I’m going to be on here for real, I might as well be on here for real.’” Ryan uses the pen to add shading and texture to a character while his partner, who goes by Josh, is in charge of line art. On Ryan’s website, RyanBanks.com, he notes that this is the first time in his life that he has felt really dedicated to art, something that he’s thought he’d be working at “in his sleep.” Ryan's most recent drawing. (RyanBanks.com) “I’m just really enjoying it so much,” he says. “And it’s a process that I enjoy so much.” Watching Ryan work was an experience
